Fully funded PhD studentships with Industry Training to study how environment impacts our cells.

Our PhD students receive a broad range of training in mechanistic, systems-based biology, allowing them to carry out pioneering research which leads to improved health outcomes.

Our projects allow students to work closely with industrial partners, providing students with additional experience in an industrial setting as well as interactions with industrial research leaders.

Applications close 14th March 2021